PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY ELECTION THROUGHOUT ILLINOIS TOMORROW

Voters Cannot Participate in Any Other Primary Than They Did Two Years Ago.

The first preferential presidential primary election in Illinois will be held throughout the state tomorrow, when voters of the various parties will express their choice for delegates to the national conventions and will also elect state and precinct committeemen.

GERMANY'S NOTE TO BE DELIVERED SOON

REPLY TO U. S. ON SUSSEX MAY BE GIVEN TO GERARD TODAY.

LOST 50 PER CENT IN ATTACK

Paris Says Half of Big German Offensive Force Was Slain Sunday.

(Associated Press)

Four British steamships — Silksworth Hall, Yonne, Zafra and Glenalmon—a combined tonnage of 15,300, have been sunk. The Yonne was sunk without warning, it is said, and three of the Silksworth Hall's crew are missing. All of the ships were unarmed.

On the Verdun Front.

The Germans continued their attacks last night over a front 13 miles long, Paris says. In the fighting west of the Meuse and for the possession of Dead Man's Hill the Germans were repulsed except on a front 500 yards long near Hill 295. East of the river the Germans have gained no appreciable results.

Teils of Horrors.

Monsiegnor Ginistry, Bishop of Verdun, is the latest arrival from the shell swept city whose cathedral and Bishop's place are now in the center of the smoking ruins. All civilians have been ordered to leave Verdun. Bishop Ginistry said: "The Germans are assailing Verdun with fury, but they will never get the town."

Note Coming Today.

Lansing announced Ambassador Gerard had cabled that the German office had given information to the effect that it would send him a note on the Sussex case, probably today.

Bernstorff will confer with Lansing this afternoon at the former's request.

Germans Lost Heavily.

A Paris news dispatch says that German forces numbering about 150,000 which attacked French positions yesterday northwest of Verdun lost 50 per cent of their number in the drives.

London, April 10.—The great German drive west of the Meuse has at last captured Bethincourt. The peak of the French salient, which has been the object of the German attacks for nearly two weeks, was evacuated by the French Saturday night, according to the midnight communique from Paris, and a terrific battle raged along the entire line from Bethincourt to the Meuse Sunday, with the crown prince's forces moking furious attacks to break through to the Verdun-St. Menehould railway.

Military critics here agree that the advance is the most important made by the Germans since the drive southward along Forges Creek was started nearly four weeks ago, and though the French retreat has been predicted for days its importance is in no way minimized.

Menace to Germans.

Bethincourt, lying approximately ten miles northwest of the city of Verdun, has been held by the French in the face of terrific German attacks for many days, while the Teuton advance continued both east and west of the town, leaving that stronghold as a serious flanking menace to the Germans advancing around Malancourt and west of Mort Homme. The danger of a flanking attack by the French was a constant check on the German drive, while the French on the other hand faced a cross fire which threatened to cut off 120,000 men defending the salient.

French Strengthen Line.

By the retreat from the town and the abandonment of this position projecting like a spear into the German front the French have straightened out their line to a position much more easily defended, but offering the Germans a clearer line of attack.

At the same time the advance may mean serious result if the new French lines are not strongly held, as the move toward the French connecting railway is now opened to straight attacks.

French Gain Near Douaumont.

Hand-to-hand fighting in the communication trenches south of Douaumont village, where the chief French attacks have been launched for the past ten days, resulted in the capture of nearly 200 yards of German trenches, according to the official report received from Paris, which says a number of prisoners were taken.

Italian Progress Reported.

Rome, April 10.—Violent artillery duels on several points of the Austro-Italian front and several local successes are reported by the war office. Between Ozli and Vodil, where the Italians executed a successful surprise attack a few days ago, 131 prisoners, including five officers were taken.

Mrs. C. W. oBwers was here Saturday from Ashton.

TWO DEPOT AVENUE STORES WERE ROBBED

FULTZ' AND JONES' GROCERIES ENTERED EARLY SUNDAY MORNING.

WAS PROBABLY LOCAL TALENT

Officers Believe Work Was Pulled by Dixon Fellows—Their Booty Was Small.

Burglars early Sunday morning entered the W. C. Jones and L. S. Fultz grocery stores on Depot avenue. At the former store about $5 was taken from the cash register, also some cigars were taken, but at the Fultz store they only got into the shed at the rear and did not get into the store itself.

At the Jones store the glass in one of the front doors was broken with a stone, which was found in the store. The opening was large enough for a small man to pass through. About 1 o'clock Officer Edward Whetstein passed on his way to the depot and everything was all right but 20 minutes later in passing he discovered a broken window. He immediately notified Mr. Jones and the two went to the store where it was found the cash register had been forced open and about $8 in pennies and other change were gone. The register in the substation of the postoffice had also been opened and change taken. Indications are that local talent pulled the work and the officers are now working on the case.

FAILED TO DISCOVER CAR VICTIM'S IDENTITY

STRANGER, KILLED BY NORTHWESTERN TRAIN, BURIED IN POTTERS FIELD.

INQUEST SATURDAY AFTERNOON

The jury which enquired into the death of the stranger killed by a C. & N. W. passenger train Friday night a mile west of Nachusa, after hearing testimony, returned an open verdict Saturday evening finding that he had been struck by a train. The jurymen: R. C. Bovey, foreman; Charles Eastman, Lee Dysart, Chas. Powell, D. S. Horton and Morris Rosbrook.

Engineer McGrath testified that when he first saw the stranger he was lying between the east and westbound tracks. The man attempted to raise up and seemed to plunge over ahead of his train. He applied the air but as they were running fast most of the train passed over the victim's body before he could stop. It is thought by some he may have fallen from another train and attempting to get out of the way of the passenger train became dazed and fell in front of the train.

His identity was not learned. A Sterling lady called up Mr. Staples on Saturday and asked for a description of the man, thinking he might be her husband, who left home Thursday, saying he was going to Chicago. The descriptions of the men did not tally. The remains were so badly mutilated that it was impossible to keep them and were buried Saturday afternoon in Oakwood cemetery.

(Associated Press)

Ynese Salazar, a former Huerta general who has been living in El Paso, is reported to have gone into Mexico with intentions hostile toward the United States. Scarcity of Coffee.

Pershing's headquarters, dated April 8, telling of the scarcity of coffee and tobacco, says that one officer offered a dollar in gold for a cup of well used coffee grounds and that his bid was refused. Another officer said he had used the same grounds eleven times, and he added: "The last few times I was drinking the suggestion of coffee, but it kept me happy."

Villa May Get Help.

Report From Pershing.

Officials Ask Questions.

Consul Redgers has advised the state department that Carranza officials at Querato have intimated to him that they would like to know how long the U. S. troops are going to remain in Mexico.

Administration officials said the de facto government has not set a date upon which American troopers should be withdrawn from Mexico but it was admitted in various quarters that the action on the part of Carranza would not be surprising. The belief is based on the assumption that Villa's bandits have been dispersed.

People Favor Good Roads But Fear Their Big Cost

ECONOMICS OF GOOD ROADS AND VARIOUS TYPES

(By G. H. T. Shaw)

The general statement of the tax payers of Lee county is that they are in favor of good roads but they have a very natural fear that once public sentiment gets started and a general wave of enthusiasm sweeps over the country, and it may start a program of road building, so ambitious and so hastily planned, that the county will be saddled with an immense indebtedness without receiving commensurate benefits. There is a very real reason for this apprehension on the part of the public men who will have to foot the bills. A case in point: The county of Macklesberg, N. C., put out in 1870 a 20 year $300,000 6% bond issue for road building. There was no provision made for amortization therefor, in 1890 after having paid $360,000 interest, a new issue of bonds for $300,000 was necessary and the new issue was made for 30 years with no arrangement for paying off the indebtedness. Meanwhile the roads built under the bond issue have long since practically disappeared and the debt remains. It is to avoid situations such as this that conservative people feel like doing some "figuring" before committing themselves to a new county wide scheme of road building.

There is nothing mysterious about the "pros and cons" of the value of good roads. In a general way, the amount of money the public will be warranted in spending for roads can be calculated with sufficient accuracy to be a safe basis for forming an opinion in any particular case.

In the first place, roads are necessary. It takes no argument to prove that much. Next, how much money is it good business to spend on roads? In determining this point it must be recognized that there is warrant for spending more money on some roads than on others. The measure of use of a road by the general public should be the basis for classifying a road as to its importance. For convenience we may classify the country roads of Lee county into three classes: Class No. 1, roads of prime importance, carrying traffic between towns and giving connection with the county seat; Class No. 2, roads of secondary importance, traversing well settled farming communities; and Class No. 3, "Blind end" roads and roads carrying no through traffic, in sparsely set-

CLOSETS.

Closets are small compartments built in houses for the purpose of concealing skeletons, clothes, naughty children, shoes and bad housekeeping. Closets are not important to men because they are not forced to use them. But they are everything to women. A home may have a poor furnace, a leaky roof and rheumatic system of plumbing, but if it has two large closets in each room, a woman will rent it with a cry of joy, and will live happily in it until she can find some house which is nine blocks from the street car, but has one more closet and a window in it at that.

Closets are very useful, because they keep rooms so clean and orderly, and closet doors are very useful, because they can be shut and locked, thus keeping reckless husbands from wandering into the closets and getting lost. Husbands are the greatest drawbacks to closets anyway. A husband is forever trying to crowd into a beautiful, large closet and hang up a pair of pants in it. Marriages would be happier if husbands were more considerate in this regard. Only the other day a man in Seattle, who had always been considered kind and noble, broke into a beautiful closet and misplaced eleven skirts, nine waists, four hat boxes, eighteen pairs of shoes, a sealskin coat, three muffs, a feather boa, and an opera cape while trying to locate a vest; and the vest wasn't there, either. His wife had given it to the Salvation Army long ago. A good many closets are supposed to contain skeletons, but this is a minor affliction beside a husband. A skeleton doesn't root around in a closet and turn it inside out trying to find its shoes.

Closets have been getting larger during the past few years, mainly because of the great demand for space for evening gowns. A good many houses can't be rented any more and are being torn down because their closets will not hold more than 37 party dresses. As the closets have grown in size, the sleeping rooms have, of course, grown smaller. A great many sleeping rooms are now being hung outside of the house altogether on the pretense that it is healthier to sleep out doors. But the real reason is because it is so very much nicer to use the fine large sleeping room for a closet.

"WILD BOB" BURMAN KILLED IN AUTO RACE

Mechanician Also Dies in Crash at Corona.

Corona, Cal., April 10.—"Wild Bob" Burman of Detroit, Mechanician Eric Schrader of Chicago, and Track Policeman W. H. Speer, dead, and five spectators injured, three of whom may die—that made up the tragedy that wound up the third annual Corona road race.

Burman suffered a fractured skull, several ribs were crushed and both legs were broken. Burman died in the city hospital at Riverside, where he was taken from the track. Mrs. Burman was with her husband soon after the accident and remained with him until he died.

"Wild Bob" Burman deserved the name. He was noted more for his disregard of danger than for his triumphs.

His most famous achievement was his world's record drive against time at Daytona, Fla., in April, 1911, when at the wheel of the Blitzen Benz, he covered a mile at an average of 141 miles an hour.

SCIENCE—INDUSTRY.

Gasoline From Shale.

In view of the ever increasing demand for gasoline and the increase in price of crude oil, from which it is obtained, it is important to know that an almost inexhaustible supply of oil may be obtained from the shale of northwestern Colorado, northeastern Utah and southwestern Wyoming. This shale contains materials which, when heated, may be converted into crude oil, gas and ammonia. The high cost of distilling oil from shale as compared to the cost of producing oil from wells has thus far prevented the development in this country of such an industry and may continue to prevent it for some time, but sooner or later this great source of supply will be utilized to supplement the decreasing production from the regular oil fields.

The oil derived from the shale is similar to that which is being produced from wells in the United States at the rate of more than 250,000,000 barrels a year. When refined by ordinary methods the shale oil yields an average of about 10 per cent gasoline, 35 per cent kerosene and a large amount of paraffin.—United States Geological Survey.

Campers' Pump Filter.

A compact pump has been placed upon the market which overcomes the difficulty in obtaining pure drinking water that frequently interferes with the pleasure of camping or of long automobile trips. The pump includes an intake pipe and a filter chamber. The lower end of the intake pipe may be placed in the muddiest kind of water. It is covered with a fine mesh strainer through which the water is drawn by the upstroke of the piston. The water is forced from the pipe into the filter chamber, where it passes through a mixture of infusorial earth—a fine clay formed of the residue of microscopic shells—and from there is discharged through the nozzle of the pipe. A supporting leg fixes the pump to the edge of the stream or pond supplying the water. Scientific tests prove that water passing through this pump filter can be used with safety for every purpose.

Beaching a Motorboat.

The device herewith shown for beaching a boat consists of a piece of three inch pipe about eighteen inches long placed so that it will revolve on four inverted casters, which are screwed to a board, says Popular Mechanics. When the boat has been run aground the device is placed under the keel and the boat is pushed by hand until the entire length of the keel has traversed the roller. The device is again shifted forward and the process repeated until the boat is high and dry. If two sets of rollers are used the process is considerably easier. The outfit is small and can be readily carried in the boat for use wherever it is desired to beach it.

Making a Reamer Cut Oversize.

When a smooth round hole of small diameter is required a hand reamer is used to produce it, and many times the reamer is from .001 to .004 undersize, says Popular Mechanics. The reamer may be made to work effectively in the following manner: With a scraper made of a medium size half round file burnish the face of each flute with the oval side. This will raise an edge and cause the reamer to cut larger, the size depending on how long and hard the faces are burnished. This, of course, does not make a permanent edge, but it does very nicely in an emergency.

Advice to Motorists.

Never open the throttle too quickly, but give the motor a chance to pick up gradually.

Keep your brakes adjusted.

Familiarize yourself with the use of the hand lever brake and thus be prepared for emergencies.

Be sure to release the clutch before shifting gear.

Don't accelerate too quickly. This causes the car to jump and the motor to pound.

Should you detect any unusual noise while running, stop and investigate the cause at once.

Sea Lion Hides For Leather.

On account of the growing demand for leather, by reason of war conditions, the hunting of sea lions and the use of sea lion hides for leather are proposed as new industries for the Canadian Pacific coast. It is reported that a factory in British Columbia has made some excellent gloves, belting and other leather articles from sea lion hides.—Commerce Reports.

Use of Tire Chains.

When installing tire chains it is not advisable to have them too tight. If the chains are held in a fixed position the tread of the tire is apt to be loosened at these points. If the chain is slightly loose it will work around to different positions and cause less injury to the tread.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Christy Mathewson, Famous Baseball Pitcher.

Christy Mathewson of the New York Giants has been pitching ball in the big league since 1900. Fifteen seasons Matty has been putting them over the plate. Last year in June he developed a pain in his left shoulder, which bothered him a great deal. His 1915 season was the poorest he has had since he joined the Giants. Matty has been working hard to get into condition for the 1916 battle, and at last report his left shoulder gave him no trouble. If the pain again develops Matty will quit the mound and perhaps go on the coaching line. Perhaps he will retire from the game altogether. He can well afford to do so, as it is believed he is worth at least $150,000.

Braid at Upper Montclair.

William Braid has been chosen as the new professional of the Upper Montclair (N. J.) Country club and has reported for duty. Braid comes from the Maryland Country club, where he spent seven years and won considerable reputation as a green keeper and golfer. He is much pleased with his new position, because he will have more opportunity to play golf than he had in Baltimore, there being more expert golfers in the Upper Montclair Country club. Jerome D. Travers, the open champion, is a member of this club.

Buying English Ponies.

James C. Cooley, who has managed several polo tournaments on Long Island and at Newport, is in England buying polo ponies left behind by army officers when they were called to the war. While the government has first choice, there are many ponies unfit for cavalry service because of their size and training. Mr. Cooley hopes to purchase some of the horses used in the international matches. The ponies will be shipped to this country in April and will be used in the matches, which commence in May.

WHEN you see a man at his ease—confident, upright, composed—you may be sure that he wears tailored to measure clothes—custom tailoring does it.

No man can feel really comfortable unless he knows that his clothes fit him well and are becoming to him—a custom tailored man knows those things.

Custom tailored clothes are in right style, right weave, right color, right pattern and right tailoring—and at the right price for men who spend their money shrewdly.

C. meeting and upon returning to her home unlocked the door and found the intruders who had gained admission through the assistance of Mr. Alderfer's latchkey. The occasion proved a very enjoyable one. A delicious scramble dinner was served. A little poem, telling what the club has accomplished since its organization three years ago with Mrs. Jesse Brown as president, was read by its author, one of the members. The poem follows:

Wooh! Wooh! Wooh!
You Snaidnis will understand
We're celebrating her birthday
With our good old Indian band.

It's only been a few short weeks
Since you invited us to come
And now upon this occasion
We took possession of your home.

We're no talented musicians,
Nor every this and that;
But we all know how to crochet
And most of us can "tat."

We play the game 500,
Though one can't hold her cards,
But we all have just stacks of fun,
So there isn't any odds.

But in the line of cookery
We claim we're hard to beat,
And we've brought along some samples
For anyone to test,
And invite you now, dear Clara,
To join in with the rest.

We wish you many birthdays,
With health, wealth and good cheer,
And unless the Lord isn't willing
We'll meet again next year.

Woman's Club.

At the regular meeting of the Woman's club Saturday at Miller hall interesting subjects. "Domestic Science" and "Supervised Playgrounds" were discussed in papers by two city teachers, Miss Kristoffersen, instructor of domestic science in the Dixon high schools, discussing the former from the standpoint of its value to the school, and the topic of playgrounds and their value to children from the standpoint of the teacher being enlarged upon by Miss Jennie Oakes, a grade teacher in North Dixon schools. The club has as its aim for the year, together with the establishment of a city rest room in co-operation with the Commercial club, a supervised playground and Miss Oakes' paper was the "opening gun" in the campaign. The program was in charge of the household science department, of which Mrs. D. G. Palmer is the chairman.

Preliminary to the program the club elected as delegates to the district federation May 4 and 5, at Galena, Mrs. L. W. Newcomer and Mrs. A. G. Barnham, with Mrs. D. G. Palmer and Mrs. J. E. Traber as alternates.

"The Flower Song" from Opus 39, Gustave Lange, a violin and piano duet by Charles Hey and Mrs. Lee Read, opened the program. The papers of the afternoon followed.

Miss Kristoffersen in discussing the value of domestic science in schools, spoke of the need, now that the factory supplants the home in the production of so much that is used in the home, of instruction of what formerly was learned in the home as a matter of necessity. She defined home arts as the connecting link between the industrial and social conditions as far as the physical is concerned, as the physical health of the individuals in the home depends upon a knowledge of what is used in the manufacture of food and the food constituents necessary to build up the body. As an outline of what instructors in houshold economics aim to teach Miss Kristoffersen gave the following: Economical use of fuel, processes of sterilizing, choosing and preparing food, home sanitation. This was followed by an outline of the work carried on the the Dixon school.

Mrs. Lee Read, at the close of the first paper, sang as an introduction to the subject of playgrounds, "Toyland" and as an encore, "A Boy's Troubles."

That childhood is the seedtime for a useful life and that organized play tends tothe best development of the child, was emphasized by Miss Oakes in her paper, who quoted from the scriptures, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again," dwelling upon the responsibility of the parent and teacher, and making a new beatitude, "Blessed is the father, mother or teacher, who can again become a little child and enjoy playing with the children."

VOTE TOMORROW.

The Presidential Primaries occur tomorrow and because of the lack of contest in the election many people will not take the trouble to vote, but the vote of every party member is needed just the same. There are contests in both the the democratic and republican ranks for delegate to the national convention.

There are three candidates for delegate to the national convention of the republican party, from this district. One of the candidates, H. C. Warner, is from Dixon and Lee county and it is up to the loyal republicans from this county to get out and help elect Mr. Warner at the election tomorrow. Mr. Warner is chairman of the republican county central committee and he has devoted a great deal of his time and energy to the interests of the party. Furthermore, Lee county has not been represented in the republican national convention for many years and this honor is due the county.

The other two candidates are James Cowley of Freeport and Scott Cowan of Carroll county. There are two to be elected. Warner of Lee and Cowan of Stephenson are the two men who should be elected. Take what time is necessary tomorrow and get to the polls and vote. You owe it to your party to do this. Don't let a light vote in this county give the impression that the voters are indifferent to the candidacy of Senator Sherman and the various delegates.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Soldier Got Out of A Dungeon.

"I won't!" yelled the king.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

"A STORY, daddy; a story!" cried Jack and Evelyn.

So daddy told them about a soldier who loved a king's daughter and got pitched into a dungeon for it. It is most unpleasant to lie in a dirty prison and through your bars watch people coming to see you hanged. That is just what the soldier did, till by and by along passed a shoemaker's boy in his leather apron and slippers. He was in such a hurry to see the soldier hanged that he lost one of his slippers. It fell close under the soldier's window, where he was peeking through.

"'Boy, don't be in such a hurry,' whispered the soldier through the bars. 'Nothing will happen till I get there. But if you will run to my hotel and fetch me my tinder box I'll give you a penny.'

"The boy was delighted to earn a penny and soon fetched the soldier his tinder box. Out in the square the king and queen sat upon a beautiful throne raised before a scaffold, and the place thronged with people. The soldier mounted the scaffold and asked if he might be allowed to smoke his last pipe. The king granted this, and the soldier took his tinder box and struck fire three times, and up popped three enchanted dogs—one with eyes as big as saucers, one with eyes as big as millstones and another with eyes as big as the round tower of the dungeon the soldier had just left. Then the dogs flew at the soldiers who guarded the prisoner and tossed them up in the air, so that when they fell they broke all to pieces. Some they took by the legs, some by their ears and some by their noses, throwing them away into the air.

"'I won't go!' yelled the king as the dog with eyes like a round tower took him and the queen and threw them after the soldiers.

"Then the people in the square became frightened and shouted, 'Oh, good soldier, you shall be our king and marry the beautiful princess!'

"So they led the soldier to the king's chariot and put him in it, while the three dogs frisked along in front and shouted 'Hurrah! Hurrah!' All the small boys put their fingers in their mouths and whistled, and all the soldiers who had not been thrown away in the air presented arms. The beautiful princess came out of her great copper castle and became queen, which pleased her very much after being locked up so long. The wedding took place within a week, and all three dogs had seats at the wedding breakfast, where they sat staring at the new queen with all six of their huge eyes," daddy finished.

"And did the new king and his queen live happily ever afterward?" Jack wanted to know. And daddy and Evelyn smiled.

PROBING DEATH OF CHLOROFORM VICTIM

Detroit Jeweler Believes Former Ward Was Murdered.

Alton, Ill., April 10.—Charles Kroener of Detroit, a jeweler, is making an investigation in Alton, St. Louis and Edwardsville of the circumstances surrounding the death of Miss Elizabeth Hauck, who died in Alton September 27, 1915. Kroener says she was a former ward of his, and that he believes she met with foul play.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict to Deputy Coroner John A. Berner of Alton that Miss Hauck, who was thirty years old, committed suicide. It was believed she used chloroform. Kroener declares it is impossible for was believed she used chloroform without outside assistance to cause death.

An unwitnessed note, in which $689 was divided was found in Miss Hauck's purse. The money was with it. When the note was presented to Probate Judge Joseph P. Strueber at Edwardsville he refused to admit it to probate.

Mrs. Mary O'Malley of Jackson avenue left today for Rochester, Minn., for several weeks' visit.

FAVOR GOOD ROADS BUT FEAR BIG COST

tled districts. It may be taken as granted that the patrons of Class No. 3 roads can at present expect nothing more than a well graded dirt road; Class No. 2 roads should be divided again into separate divisions and constructed of gravel, macadam, or hard-rolled and well oiled dirt roads. Class No. 1 should have a wearing surface of brick or cement.

The reasons for expending money in making a better road than a dirt road are: that on a hard road heavier loads can be hauled, thus reducing the cost of getting crops to market; the availability of the road at all times of the year; and the pleasure and comfort of having a good road to ride over instead of a rough one.

The average haul for delivery of farm products to railroad, in Illinois, is about 4.8 miles (Baker) and costs the farmer on an average of 10 cents per ton mile, that is, it costs Illinois farmers an average of 48 cents per ton to deliver their crops to railroad. (Government reports claim the cost as 23 cents per ton mile but that figure is way high as an average).

The above figures are the best obtainable at present and represent hauling on good dirt roads and in favorable weather. The tractive resistance per ton for hauling loads at a speed of say 3 miles per hour on a good ordinary level dirt road is 125 pounds per ton, for the same on macadam 60 pounds per ton and on brick or cement 27½ pounds per ton. These figures show that a farmer can haul with the same power, over twice as much on a macadam road as on a dirt road and over 4½ times as much on a brick or cement road. The money value of this feature of hard roads cannot be calculated in general terms to fit all cases but it does show in a convincing manner, one of the phases of the cash value of hard roads to the farmer.

The money value of having a hard road near to a farm so that crops can be moved at any time of the year, is also a very hard problem to definitely fix to cover all cases, but it is a real and evident asset to any farm.

The cash value of having good roads available at all times of the year for automobiling or driving to town for business or pleasure, is another intangible asset but of real importance in the business and social life of every community.

This feature of "availability and ease" of adjoining hard roads, we believe has never been given the serious consideration it deserves by the average Lee county farmer. A man who owns 160 acres of good land would, at first thought, strenuously oppose any movement toward putting a tax of $10 per acre (in one payment) on farm land for building permanent hard roads in his neighborhood, but thinks nothing of buying an automobile at from $640 to $1600, an amount equal to from $4 to $10 per acre on his farm and for the acquiring of a short-lived luxury with heavy current expense attached to its use.

From an exhaustive study of all phases of the subject as applied to this part of Illinois it appears that it is not only desirable but it is an economic necessity in a country as well settled as Lee county, to have established at once, trunk lines consisting of brick or cement concrete roads, connecting all towns and cities; to build graded, rolled and oiled dirt roads, macadam or gravel roads so that no quarter section of land will be more than one mile from a hard road available for traffic at all times of the year.

The cost, per mile, of hard roads such as brick, cement, macadam, or gravel, varies considerably according to location, but as an average we can use the following prices as a basis in this county:

For a brick road 16 feet wide with 3 foot macadam shoulders and including grading, $10,000 per mile.

For cement road 10 feet wide with 3 foot macadam shoulders and including grading, $8,000 per mile.

For macadam or gravel roadway 16 feet wide including grading and rolling, $4,000 per mile.

For a well graded, rolled and thoroughly oiled dirt road, 16 foot roadway, $600 per mile.

If a well balanced road system were laid out to cover a typical township in Lee county today it would result as follows:

|---|---|
| 12 miles "trunk line" at average of $9000 or | $108,000 |
| 23 miles macadam or gravel at $4000 or | 96,000 |
| 36 miles oiled roads at $600 or | 21,600 |
| Total for township | $225,600 |

This would be less than $10 per acre on the 23040 acres in the township. Such a system once established, the yearly up-keep would be nominal and the service afforded would be well worth the investment. Who would pay for it?

In another article the equitable distribution of the cost of Good Roads will be discussed.

A Story of Mountain Railroad Life

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

AUTHOR OF "WHISPERING SMITH," "THE MOUNTAIN DIVIDE," "STRATEGY OF GREAT RAILROADS," ETC.

NOVELIZED FROM THE MOVING PICTURE PLAY OF THE SAME NAME. PRODUCED BY THE SIGNAL FILM CORPORATION. COPYRIGHT, 1915, BY FRANK H. SPEARMAN.

SYNOPSIS.

Little Helen Holmes, daughter of General Holmes, railroad man, is rescued from imminent danger on a scenic railroad, by George Storm, a newsboy. Grown to young womanhood Helen makes a spectacular double rescue of Storm, now a freight fireman, and of her father and his friends, Amos Rhinelander, financier, and Robert Seagrue, promoter, from a threatened collision between a passenger train and a runaway freight.

CHAPTER II.

A fight among the directors—and a bitter fight—had been indicated from the moment the allotment of the stock issue of the new Copper Range and Tidewater cut-off line was discussed. It was not alone that the territory of the proposed cut-off was rich in traffic. The survey made by Holmes' engineers through a wild country, hitherto reputed inaccessible, had developed a low-grade pass through the Superstition mountains that would put the Tidewater's active rival—the Colorado and Coast line—with its heavy grades and curves, at a serious, if not irretrievable, disadvantage, in its fight for competitive traffic.

General Holmes, seated in the library of his country home with his associate, Amos Rhinelander, took from his morning mail a letter from John B. Rhodes, chairman of his executive committee, which revealed the extent of the feeling over the situation. Holmes handed the letter to Rhinelander. Rhodes had discovered that their competitors already had a surveying party out on reconnoisance, endeavoring to locate the Tidewater pass; having in view the reputation for sharp practice of the Colorado line backers, he urged Holmes to keep a close watch on the original survey, now in the general's possession, until the right of way should be definitely secured. He added that with his party of the directors, he would arrive on a special at noon for the informal board meeting at which means for financing the project were to be arranged.

Through a complication in financial arrangements, Holmes had been obliged to put on his own, the Tidewater line board, a minority group of directors led by Rhinelander's nephew, Seagrue and Seagrue's attorney, Capelle—Seagrue was owner of a substantial interest in the Colorado and Coast line itself. Indeed, his means were all tied up in it. It was this complication which caused uneasiness in Holmes' mind and called for prudence—not all those even of his own directorate could be trusted, in the circumstances, not to connive against his interest.

Seagrue had already been for the week-end the house guest of Holmes. He was at that moment seated in the garden with Helen—Holmes' daughter—and Helen was being alternately amused and bored by the patently forced efforts of the easterner to interest her in himself and his affairs. More than once during his stay she had refused to listen seriously to him and now to annoy him, she professed to wonder, as the blast of a freight engine whistle sounded at the moment through the hills, whether that might not be George Storm, one of her father's many engineers—a man to whom she had lately rendered a great and gratuitous service and about whom Seagrue himself had once tried to twit her. And it so chanced that it really was young Storm's train running by them for the passing track. He had orders to wait there for the directors' special.

Toward noon, Holmes and his guests, together with Helen, started for the station to meet the train. Its arrival was the occasion of many greetings for Helen from old New York friends who declared that the mountain sun and air had wrought wonders for the once delicate girl.

It was while she stood thus on the platform surrounded by her newly arrived guests that a young engineman crossed the platform, cap in hand. After a slight hesitation he walked up to her as if he would speak. Again, as if undecided, he halted just before Helen. She noticed the rather grimy appearance of the stalwart engineman, obviously just from his cab, but did not look closely enough to recognize him. If he was pausing, as he stood, for courage, it rose in him, for as her eyes returned to him, he stepped nearer to her: "I think it was you who saved my life the other day," he said somewhat haltingly. Then he questioningly held out his hand, "Will you accept my thanks?"

The moment he spoke, Helen knew him—it was Storm, the fireman of the freight wreck. Indeed, she remembered him almost too well. Her face flushed with embarrassment. Her guests, without catching what he had said, were critically inspecting the smoked engineer. Something like a wave of resentment swept over Helen. Why should he choose this, of all moments, to speak to her? She was quite innocent of false pride; but her friends could not possibly understand the situation and Storm with real western impulsiveness had chosen, it seemed, the most inopportune time possible to express his gratitude.

But there was his outstretched hand—should she ignore it? Anger swayed her—yet something within her, and something in Storm's eyes and his manner, pleaded against cutting him dead. With furiously red cheeks but sweeping aside the cost, Helen put out her hand. "It was nothing," she said quickly. "Do not think of it." Then she repaid Storm's impulsive stupidity, as she thought it deserved, by catching at something Seagrue was saying and failing to see Storm again. The engineer had come up prepared really to say how grateful he was; he found himself, in a fleeting second, already well launched on the social toboggan and shooting toward the bottom of a long hill. Seagrue, almost before Storm's back was turned, was laughing at Helen and pointing to her glove. The white, soft kid now bore beyond repair the heavy, black fingerprints of the engineman's hand.

Questions and banterings from her companions contributed nothing toward restoring Helen's composure. But as the group moved to the waiting motor cars, she unostentatiously drew the offending glove over her wrist and threw it away. One pair of eyes watched the action closely; Storm, collecting his wits after his social disaster, noted what she had done. He was too philosophical to resent it. Instead, crossing the platform, when the party had driven away, he picked up the discarded glove and put it in his pocket.

Nor did he, in his turn, escape unseen. As one of the cars whirled around a nearby corner Helen, looking back at the scene of her annoyance, saw Storm picking up something white; she knew it was her glove.

On reaching home—where the ladies were taken to their various rooms and the men went to their business—Helen, from her own room overlooking the passing track, watched the freight, bearing Storm, draw out and stop before the station for orders.

Turning to her glass more than once to see whether her cheeks were still as flushed as they felt, she was gratified to find that traces of her humiliation had disappeared. Her mind, from which she had tried to dismiss the whole incident, was now assailed by a rebellious curiosity concerning what she had seen happen on the distant platform when Storm crossed it to pick up her glove. As his frank eyes returned again and again to her imagination, something seemed to call her strongly, back to where he still was detained. She resisted longer; then surrendering to a sudden impulse, she ran downstairs, while her guests were disposing themselves, stepped into her racing car, drove to the station and alighting just as Storm came out of the telegraph office, she herself began to search at the edge of the platform for something. The engineer, after an interval, deliberately joined her.

"You have lost something."

Helen glanced up with affected surprise. "Nothing of moment. I missed a ring when I got home," she fabricated lightly, "and one of my gloves. I thought I might have dropped the one with the other here."

Storm's hand moved toward his blouse, then regaining his composure, he withdrew his hand, empty, and affected to search along the roadway with her. It was a brief duel of wits, but one in which the railroad man was no longer at a disadvantage. He was quite willing to search as long as she would linger and Helen, more than a little interested, was capricious and did linger until Storm's slow sentences began once more to bear too directly on the episode of the wreck and his gratefulness; then with a hasty goodby she started for home and Storm, climbing into his engine, pulled out with his long train.

General Holmes, in the meantime, with his two jealous groups of directors, was striving in his drawing room to arrive with them at a mutually satisfactory settlement of the proposed stock issue. In reserving 30,000 shares of this for himself and his friends, Holmes had allotted 20,000 to Seagrue and his Wall street associates. This both Seagrue and Capelle had bluntly refused to accept, since the proposed line would work havoc with the through and local traffic of the Colorado and Coast road. Seagrue demanded instead an equal distribution of the new stock. Holmes and Rhinelander, after a long conference, put the motion flatly to the eleven directors. Seven of them supported President Holmes' proposal.

Seagrue, white with anger, rose. "Cancel our allotment, then. We will fight."

"Tut, tut, Earl," protested Rhinelander. "That's no way to talk."

"We will fight," echoed Capelle, equally wrought up. "Seagrue is right. If we are to be treated in this way we'll parallel your tracks!"

Rhinelander, Holmes and their associates tried in vain to pacify the two; their efforts were useless. Hard words passed and more threats were uttered; the meeting broke up in disorder.

Seagrue and Capelle retired to an adjoining room. Helen passed before them down the hall. Capelle glanced at her and looked toward Seagrue. His face stretched into one of his hollow grins.

"Bad business for you, Seagrue," he said to his companion. "If you can't unload your Colorado and Coast holdings, this thing will put you pretty near out of the game."

"Unload," snorted Seagrue, wrathfully. "When that cut-off is announced Colorado stock won't sell for waste paper."

Helen repassed the hall. Capelle nodded toward her. "There's your best bet, Seagrue. Holmes would give his son-in-law anything."

Seagrue looked glum. He hinted he had already tried that out, and fruitlessly, but spurred by his friend's suggestion, he determined on a further effort. After luncheon he attempted to renew his addresses.

But there seemed about the self-willed girl a certain barrier of independence, which, try as he would, he could never penetrate. "What's the matter, Helen?" he demanded at last. "You seem to take everything I say as a joke."

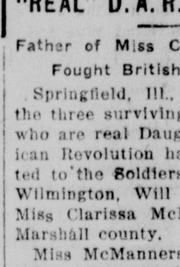

She repressed a little bubble of laughter. "That's the spirit it's meant in, isn't it?"

He was too irritated to be patient. Toward evening he assayed to be serious again; again she lightly evaded his advances.

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particulary those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Dramatic Notes

This is a story of the present war propaganda and the plot is startling in the extreme. On Tuesday night a variety of high class photo plays will be shown including an American feature in multiple reels entitled "The Happy Masquerader" with Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood in the leading roles; two other splendid reels are also on this bill. On Thursday the second episode of "The Girl and the Game" will be shown, the story now running in the Dixon Evening Telegraph and shown at the Princess theatre matinee and night.

LA FOLLETTE WINS IN WISCONSIN PRIMARIES

Final Figures Show Great Upset in Results.

Milwaukee, April 10.—One of the biggest surprises in the political history of Wisconsin was sprung when the final figures in the vote for candidates for delegates to the Republican national convention were totaled and showed that Robert M. La Follette, heretofore considered beaten, would control the Wisconsin delegation by two votes. The delegation will stand: Progressives, 14; conservatives, 12.

The returns from the first had given Philipp and his delegates a majority of anywhere from 4 to 14. The conservatives carried the industrial centers outside of Milwaukee, such as Beloit and Janesville, considered strong La Follette territory previously.

La Follette will have three delegates at large. Philipp received the highest number of votes of the candidates for delegates at large, 69,161.

MACHINE TO RESTORE LIFE

Johns Hopkins Physicians Invent Devise for Use in Drownings.

Baltimore, April 10.—Some time ago physicians at the Johns Hopkins hospital invented a machine to restore to life those apparently dead from drowning. The machine proved successful on animals that could be put under treatment immediately after accident.

With the idea of restoring life some time after the accident had occurred the physicians began to search for the desired serum. This has now been found. It has been tried on animals in the laboratories and in a number of cases has proven successful.

TANNER WINS IN NEW YORK

Republicans Re-elect Him State Chairman—Favors Hughes or Root.

New York, April 10.—The newly elected Republican state committee re-elected as chairman Frederick C. Tanner of this city.

Hughes for the presidency and toward a renomination for Governor Charles S. Whitman. Mr. Tanner's second choice is Elihu Root, and he says there is no sentiment in the delegation for Roosevett.

MOB BREAKS UP PACIFISTS

Various peace societies had organized the demonstration. Sylvia Pankhurst, the militant suffragist, was prominent among the promoters.

ALASKA'S MOOSE HERDS.

Unless Protected They May Go the Way of the Buffalo.

An interesting report of a hunting trip made last November in Alaska has just been received at the war department from First Lieutenant Clarence A. Dougherty of the signal corps, on duty in connection with the military telegraph system in that territory, with station at Seward. He hunted near the shores of Skilak lake, just south of its central point, not leaving its shores over a distance of six miles at any time. He was accompanied by a licensed guide. Among other things, he says in the report:

"Moose are in that country literally by the hundred. My time was limited, and I hunted for only three days before starting on my return journey. At no time was I absent from camp longer than six hours. I was only at the beginning of the moose country, yet the first day I saw thirty-seven moose, the second forty-two, and the third, before I killed mine, had counted over twenty. I was anxious to get a large head and was searching out for this with my field glasses until a proper sized one was found. I was within less than 100 feet of moose several times and could get within 500 yards of any bunch in sight. I counted twenty-seven bull moose in one herd at one time. The one I killed had a spread of sixty and one-half inches, but it was the largest herd I saw. I killed only one, but could just as easily have killed a dozen."

Lieutenant Dougherty recommends the creation of a national game preserve in that section. He says: "The hunters are more or less relentlessly following this game, and it is only a question of a few years before, like the buffalo, it will be a thing of the past. A small restricted area as a haven of refuge for them would always insure an overflow into the surrounding country and the conservation of animals very valuable for their meat."—Washington Post.

One Auto Every Mile.

In the days when the horse was king of the road the people of the United States bought 1,000,000 buggies a year. The sale of automobiles is just reaching the mark set by the buggy. Last year 448 manufacturers produced 892,618 vehicles and orders for 300,000 remained unfilled. This year plants are being increased to provide the 1916 market with at least 1,000,000 cars. Sales such as this show that the automobile has long ago got out of the class of luxuries. There were registered in 1915 in all the states 2,400,000 motorcars, which is more than one for every mile of public highway in the Union.—Christian Herald.

Warsaw and Music.

Warsaw's conservatory of music, which can boast Chopin and Paderewski among its past pupils, has lately been able to celebrate what was its one hundredth birthday if a quarter of a century of suspended animation early in its career be ignored. It was in 1815 that it was founded as a school of music and dramatic art by the Warsaw composer, John Elsner. A few years later the name was changed to conservatory, but in 1830 the institution was closed because of the revolution, and it was not until 1856 that it was reopened.

The Deepest Well.

A diamond drill hole fifteen miles west of Pittsburgh is expected by the geological survey to become the world's deepest well. The record is now held by a well of upper Silesia, 7,350 feet deep, but the latest figures give the Pennsylvania well a depth of 7,174 feet, and it is being sunk deeper, with the hope of oil and gas when the Medina sandstone is reached.

Frank Bacon was down from Oregon last evening and remained over night with friends.

HER GREAT SECRET.

She Guarded It Every Moment to Keep It From the World.

For many years she had borne her secret, never for one whole day escaping its terrifying influence. Day by day she had developed into a coward, a creature always afraid, as though one stray word would condemn her.

There are those associated with her youth who knew her secret, and she was afraid of them as though they carried pistols. She avoided her family, except to see them privately when no strangers were around, none of those who made up her present life.

She avoided visits to her old home town for fear of some chance mention of it. In that old home town were people who knew! Sometimes one of these offenders died, and she experienced relief; there was one less to tell to betray her.

Time that generally lessens the acute torture of things only added to hers. Every time any one looked scrutinizingly at her she experienced a little tremor of fear that they had discovered or heard. She took to lying about herself and her life to lead people astray—off the track. She denied her presence at certain places at certain times, even denied her acquaintance with certain persons more or less intimately associated with her. Her father knew them, or her brother, but not she.

At last she fell ill, and it was not the illness that caused her the terrible feverish anxiety. It was the fear that if she died her secret would leak out. Even the papers might get hold of it. It would be printed broadcast, and then—

She grew pale—she writhed in the agony not of death, but of fear.

Her secret was her age.—G. Vere Tyler in Judge.

Indecision.

The tragedy of life is indecision. They bury suicides at the crossroads, for that is where lurks all tragedy—the indecision of which way to choose.

His Official Capacity.

William Collier and a couple of actors were dining in a hotel cafe when Collier directed his companions' attention to a very dapper looking man with a suspicious big red nose that had just passed. "A very prominent member of the Blank Yacht club," announced Collier, with a grave air.

"WHAT'S HIS OFFICIAL CAPACITY?"

"Is that so?" asked one of the players, who, as Collier knows, always evinces a strong interest in the doings of society. What is his official capacity?"

"About three gallons, I think," said Collier.

Sarcastic.

"I wish to thank you for your great forbearance," said the departing guest.

"Oh—er—don't mention it," answered the proprietor, with a slightly puzzled look. "I'm glad you're pleased."

"Yes," continued the d. g., "considering the rapacity of the attendants in this hotel, I deem myself fortunate in not being locked in my room and held for ransom."—Pittsburgh Press.

His Early Reputation.

When Lloyd-George was a young solicitor in Wales he was riding home in his dogcart one day and came upon a little Welsh girl trudging along so wearily that he offered her a ride. She accepted silently, but all the way along the future statesman, although he tried hard to engage her in conversation, could not get her to say anything more than a timid "Yes" or "No."

Some days afterward the little girl's mother happened to meet Lloyd-George and said to him smilingly: "Do you remember that my little girl rode home with you the other day? Well, when she got home she said, 'Mamma, I rode from school with Mr. Lloyd-George, the lawyer, and he kept talking to me, and I didn't know whatever to do, for you know Mr. Lloyd-George charges you whenever you talk with him, and I hadn't any money!'"

Their Fate.

The late Dr. Talmage once called on his lawyer and found two of his parishioners there on legal business of a private nature.

"Ah, doctor," called the lawyer in greeting, "good morning! Here are two of your flock. May I ask without impertinence if you regard them as black sheep or white?"

"I don't know as yet," replied Talmage dryly, "whether they're black or white, but I'm certain that if they remain here long they'll be fleeced."

THE PRIMARY ELECTION.
Major O. J. Downing, one of the most loyal republicans of the many faithful members of that party in Dixon, takes a deep interest in the welfare of his chosen political faith and he offers a few words on the subject of the primary election which will be held in this state tomorrow:

A word in regard to the election of delegates to the national conventions of the political parties tomorrow. I beg to call the attention of our fellow republicans, who will cast their ballots, to consider profoundly the great questions and conditions that confront us, and are deeply involved in the collective action of our party. The two most important results we aim to secure are a united party and the nomination and election of a republican president. And the latter is almost entirely contingent on the success of the former.

Our leaders should themselves observe and counsel all others to be careful and considerate in the discussions of political questions, to treat in good faith and sincerely respect the opinions of others.

The time is opportune when generous cordiality should become in fact and reality the willing force that will redound to the accomplishment of our desires—the perfect unity of our party.

The action already had in many states—of the election of uninstructed delegates—is very significant of the earnest purpose to harmonize all efforts and concentrate the united action of the convention to a successful issue.

U. S. SOLDIER IS KILLED IN RIOT

Several Others Hurt in Trouble at Del Rio, Tex.

RACE WAR OVER NEGRO TROOPS

Villa Has Decamped and Moves South. General Pershing, in Report, Reiterates Outlaw Leader Is Wounded. Arrietta Brothers, Former Villistas, Cause American Concern Million Loss.

El Paso, April 10.—Private Ward, Company A, Twenty-fourth infantry, was killed in a riot at Del Rio, Tex. Several other soldiers were injured.

Washington, April 10—Serious trouble has developed between the colored troops of the Twenty-fourth infantry at Del Rio, Tex., and residents of Del Rio, according to a telegram received by Representative Garner, of Texas, and referred by Mr. Garner to Secretary Baker. The telgram, which is signed by District Judge Joseph Jones, District Attorney C. C. Belcher and Sheriff John R. Ammond, declares that the trouble at Del Rio started following the shooting of a soldier of the Twenty-fourth infantry by a member of the Texas rangers. It adds that a large number of negro soldiers of the Twenty-fourth infantry surrounded the ranger's house, firing volleys of shots, but without casualties. The telegram urged that steps be taken at once to prevent bloodshed. Immediately upon receipt of the telegram the secretary of war telegraphed General Funston to make an investigation and to take precautions to obviate the possibility of further trouble. Secretary Baker also directed that a full report of the incident be sent to him without delay.

El Paso, April 10.—Reiteration of the report that Francisco Villa is wounded was received in a report from Brigadier General Pershing, commanding the punitive expedition seeking the bandit who a month ago made a raid across the international boundary into Columbus N. M., where he commanded at a massacre of soldiers and civilians. General Pershing's report to Major General Funston again asserting Villa is wounded does not reveal the bandit's location.

People Refuse Villa Help.

Colonel George A. Dodd's cavalry has reached Parral, the general understanding is. Villa has been reported as having arrived on the outskirts of Parral and sent in emissaries to obtain supplies and to sound sentiment to determine if he could rally the armed forces at that place to his standard. Apparently he failed in this and may have hastened away.

While Colonel W. C. Brown and the Tenth cavalry was believed to be leading in the race to Parral, army headquarters officers have information inclining them to believe that Colonel Dodd, with his picked detachment of troopers was the American column to reach that point, which is not far from the border between the states of Chihuahua and Durango.

Arousing Anti-American Sentiment.

Anti-American sentiment is spreading in the section Villa is entering, it was shown by the confirmation of the news that the Arietta brothers, formerly identified with the bandit general, have inflicted a million dollar loss on an American concern by burning the big lumber plant of the Compania Madera, in the state of Durango.

Shouting, "Down with the gringoes," the Arietta bandits made a raid upon the plant and deliberately applied the torch. Hiram Smith, president of the company, owning the plant, received advices telling of the raid.

Villa Orders Americans Killed.

Villa has been trying to reach this section of Durango, where bands of outlaws, formerly of his command, have been terrorizing the residents. He has sent ahead word to kill all Americans and destroy all American property.

News has just reached here of the raid on a small garrison in a town near Jiminez. The Villistas, retreating south before the driving American advance, entered the town, attacked the garrison, killed Colonel Flores, commander of the Carranza troops, and looted the place. They appealed to the Carranza soldiers to join them in opposing the Americans.

Villistas Discuss Peace Terms.

Telegrams from Torreon announce that a peace commission is meeting near there with General Jose Banderas and his band of Villistas to discuss terms by which the Villa adherents can surrender. Banderas offers to surrender within a week if allowed six weeks in which to bring in all his men, but the Carranzistas insisted on shorter time, fearing Banderas was playing for time in which to permit Villa to reach that section and take command.
